Much Ado About Nothing

March 10-12, 2016

THE SHOW:

Beatrice and Benedick are two proud and strong personalities that clash outwardly while unrealized love simmers just beneath the surface. Meanwhile, Claudio and Beatrice's cousin Hero are fully aware of their love for each other as they plan their wedding. But even as benign gossip by their friends drives Beatrice and Benedick together, cruel gossip shatters the wedding of Hero and Claudio. Hero charged with an affair by the deceived Claudio, it's up to Beatrice and Benedick to set things right (along with a foursome of intrepid Keystone cops) in this masterful Shakespearean blend of comedy and drama.

THE PRODUCTION:

Director Tracy Poverstein's production is effectively set in a jazzy 1920s speakeasy. The Archer School for Girls' space has a natural basement feel to it that adds to the speakeasy ambience. Mood lighting by Leihua Hartley as well as Matthew Hill's set also adds some great touches to complete the feel including a bar, a stage for cabaret singers, a gramophone for accompaniment (though a handful of talented musicians provide the real accompaniment), and a few tables on the stage where cast members and some guests enjoy the nightclub.

The show is interspersed with several classic songs of the twenties performed by a variety of nightclub singers, sometimes solo and at other times joined by singing and dancing flapper girls. Julianna Goldsmith crooning Getting to be a Habit With Me. Puttin' on the Ritz by a soloist joined by backup singers and dancers and a powerful solo of Here Lies Love. A clever It Had to be You "monologue" by, depending on which night you attend, either Gabriella Weltman or Anika Ramlo as they lose themselves in giddy newfound realization of love. Livia Blum's sweet singing of Always, on some nights singing it as Hero at her wedding. Lovely and soulful period singing of Someone to Watch Over Me by Gracie Abrams, on some nights singing it as Hero as she anticipates her marriage. Sara Friedman as a whimsical Margaret singing Makin' Whoopie. And it all ends with an upbeat finale reprise by the cast of It Had to be You.

Evan Statt is Beatrice to both Anika Ramlo and Gabriella Weltman as Benedick, both pairs playing off each other with charming performances of strong and amusing personalities as they push each other's buttons, first in irritation and then in deep affection after their amusing eavesdropping scenes whilst they listen to their respective friends trick them into realizing the truth. All three are also good as the play grows serious when Hero is slandered on her wedding day. Gracie Abrams and Livia Blum create a Hero who is both loveable and fun as she enjoys life and her quirky family, and devastated by the rejection and accusations. Talia Natoli is her fiancé Claudio, excited and emotional, and lacking in self confidence that creates sympathy but also contributes to her quick jealousy. Her eventual remorse is raw and heartfelt.

Haley Cohen is a vivacious personality as Hero's father Leonato who runs and emcees the nightclub. And Livi Richards is hilarious, adlibbing and hamming it up as "too cunning to be understood" police chief Dogberry, joined by her crack team of Keystone Cops Sophia Evans-Katz, Helena Laan, and Uma Halsted. Sara Friedman shines as the sultry Margaret, Isabella Moncada as the wiseguy villain Don John, and the rest of the deep cast fills out the nightclub and story with colorful characters who transport us to 1920s Manhattan and through their delightful take on the classic comedy and drama of Much Ado.

Pippin March 16-20, 2016

THE SHOW:

The eldest son of Charlemagne can't wait to soar up into eternal fame and claim his Corner of the Sky. And although Charlemagne thinks Pippin ill-suited to battle, Pippin is eager to bask in the glory of war. Until he participates in one. And is struck by the tragedy, the carnage, the loss. Inspiring him to embark on an idealistic campaign with the promise that all problems can be solved easily. Which leads to despair, pain, and disillusionment.

In this musical by Stephen Schwartz (Godspell, Wicked) and Roger O. Hirson that legendary Bob Fosse took to Broadway, the players assure us that Pippin's got Magic to Do with the promise of a thrilling, grand finale destiny worthy of his extraordinary life. While the young widow Catherine threatens to cause Pippin to disappear into the obscure darkness of the ordinary.

THE PRODUCTION:

Director Rosalind Allen-Enciso and the group at Oaks Christian School staged a beautiful production of Pippin based on the Broadway revival circus theme and filled with imaginative touches of their own. Beautiful costumes (Jamie Hampton) and lighting (Kenneth Milbrett) help to create enchanting visuals aided by Kelsey Alexander's choreography, touches of illusion, and gymnastics by the cast. That's a stellar cast who clearly enjoys and excels at making the magic.

Elizabeth Sams leads the way as the charismatic and confident Leading Player, commanding the stage like a force of nature. Timothy Frangos is terrific as our Pippin, from his naïve youth, to his chase after glory in war (rallying the troops by promising to build a wall and make the Visigoth barbarians pay for it), to his emotional centering at Catherine's house (not to mention his valiant attempt to save the pet duck of young, saddened Theo (Coltrane Smith and Joe Matthews) without the boy noticing). He's also got a great voice for his Corner of the Sky solo. The other principal roles were double-cast, with Cat Matthews starring as Catherine on opening night. Cat has gorgeous vocals and is a perfect combination of sweet and funny with a bit of lovable dorkiness about her as she introduces herself to us, and in her charming duet with Pippin as they fall in love with a Love Song, while also touchingly conveying the loss and loneliness shadowing her life. .

Taylor Proto reigns as King Charlemagne with an easy knack for the bravado, power, and humor of the role, his voice projecting strength, age, and self-assurance as he leads War is Science. Ava Daikeler is a fun granny Berthe, taking grandson Pippin under her wing with the two of them bouncing on huge exercise balls as she delivers words and lyrics of wisdom. Abigail Cain is regal, vain, and amusing as Charlemagne's new wife Fastrada plotting to Spread a Little Sunshine and ensure her own son takes the throne. Travis Christie is hysterical as said son Lewis, always with spot-on physical comedy and a melodramatic flair no matter the circumstance (such as silently mouthing Charlemagne's pre-war prayer but with more gusto).

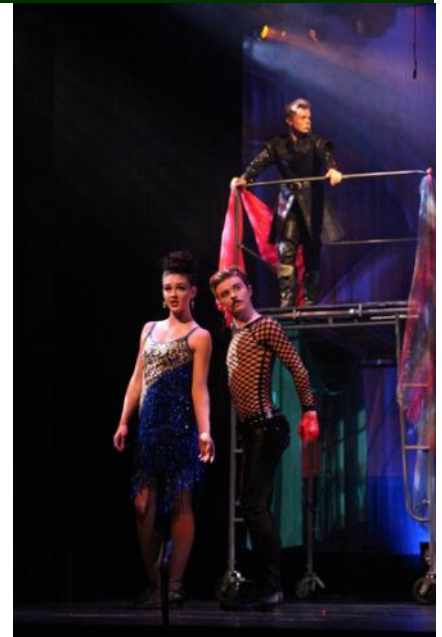

And then there are all the players guiding us through the tale. Always into it and with a clear sense of the possibilities for each scene, these talented performers weave their web with style from the opening Magic to Do, the very bloody battle scene, guiding Pippin through the hoops when he loses interest in war and discovers interest in women in the clever and playful With You, the hopeful and utopian Morning Glow, and as they eagerly and forcefully entice Pippin, or anyone else, to leave their pedestrian lives behind and embrace their fiery finale.
