The Classical Academy High School

Oklahoma!

May 21-24, 2014

Classical Academy mounted a superb production of Oklahoma! Oklahoma! is an iconic show that first came out in 1943. It was the first musical written by the team of composer Richard Rogers and librettist Oscar Hammerstein II. Set in pre-statehood Oklahoma territory, the show explores romantic relationships, in the midst of farmer and cowboy squabbles. The handsome Curley (Jonathan Norwood/Christian Winter) wants to get together with the beautiful Laurie (Jessica Jolley/Cassandra Bleher), but his prideful nature stops him from coming right out and saying it. Laurie holds her own by feigning equal ambivalence. She uses farmhand Jud (Noah Farmer/Caleb Arend), and Curley uses annoying-voice Gertie (Grace Taylor) to make the other jealous. But Jud is not a man to be trifled with.

Meanwhile, Ado Annie (Kristyn Roberts/Emily Sturges) takes up with the peddler Ali Hakim (Noah Castellero/Jared Thornburg), while her steady Will Parker (Nick DeChicchis/Anthony Escobedo) is away in Kansas City. After Will's return, Hakim amusingly helps Parker marry Ado Annie. But Hakim may end up in a shotgun wedding after all.

I was happy to see that the show was double-cast giving students extra opportunities.

This production was serenely pleasing to the senses. To begin with, the dulcet singing tones of crowd-favorite Jonathan Norwood were sublime. Christian Winter's easy-going charm and charisma was award worthy. Jessica Jolley has the whole package, and performed like a professional. Cassandra Bleher was truly astounding, with a voice of an angel. Shockingly, she is only a freshman! (Kudos to the director for casting a freshman in the lead!!) There were many other standouts in this cast, and not enough space in this review to list them all, but I must say that Noah Castellero was hilarious, and I loved watching him perform.

The sets were breathtaking and big. Rick Deussen, Dan Castellero, Rodney Palmer and the rest of the set crew outdid themselves.

The costumes were spectacular pieces of eye-candy. Jill Sturges and Kathy Pancarik, and their assistants provided the audience with colorful character-suited clothing.

The choreography was advanced. The dream sequence was particularly mesmerizing! But the sheer number of actors in the ensemble dances made the show pop with energy! Bobbi Adams is to be commended.

Jennifer McCormick acted as Director and Co-Music Director. She was superb at both. Along with Meredith Hopkins they taught beautiful harmonies to a large cast.

The show had a very good pace, was perfectly cast, had wonderful energy and movement, and pleasant blocking.

There were also many lovely voices with sporadic solo lines in the ensemble. I looked them up and found that they are not seniors. So, Classical Academy's next year looks promising. According to their program, they will be doing Shrek. I, for one, will be going to see it!!

Cheaper by the Dozen

October 9-18, 2014

THE SHOW:

Adapted by Christopher Sergel from the 1948 autobiographical book by Frank and Ernestine Gilbreth.

Narrated by the two children who wrote the book the play is based upon, Cheaper by the Dozen tells the story of growing up in the 1920s in a household of a dozen siblings. At the center of it is a tribute to their father, Mr. Gilbreth (when people asked him about having so many kids, his standing joke was that they were cheaper by the dozen). The story takes us through the kind of stories many families can relate to including quite a bit on the frustrations of the girls trying to date with an overprotective father, as well as the humorous quirks caused by this particular father's obsession with logistics and efficiency. Vigorous dishwashing training involves cutting out all unnecessary movements. The kids have a record player in the bathroom so that they can get their foreign language lessons while brushing their teeth so no time is wasted. But it's not until later that the kids learn that all this is caused by more than their father's career, and the more personal reason why he feels each second is so precious. In the end, it's a charming story about family.

THE PRODUCTION:

Director Diane Jones begins her last of many seasons at Mt. Carmel High School with this genuine and heartfelt production of Cheaper by the Dozen. The professional-looking quaint, clean, and orderly house set by Bob Lindwall frames it nicely. Debbie Waldschmidt's 1920s-era clothing helps complete the transportation to an earlier time. The attention to detail goes beyond what's clearly visible to the audience member. They created a wood checkerboard and pieces as a prop just to help the actors on stage feel more in the moment of the 1920s through all they see and touch on stage.

That cast includes Gabi Zepeda as Ernestine and Isaac Lopez as Frank getting us going and taking us through the story as the narrators. They both dive into telling embarrassing or funny family stories just like any siblings eager to tell embarrassing or funny family stories. They also combine for a great skit in the living room as they imitate their parents, much to the amusement of their siblings and parents. Those parents include Winter Sherrod in a great performance as the kind and more easygoing mother. Reed Wagner is the father and focal point of the story, and he gives a remarkably realistic, nuanced portrayal as he tries to run a tight ship, tries to deal with dating daughters and changing ways, all while hoping to maintain a warm, loving family.

There are many strong performances a few of which include Claire Keefer as the frustrated Anne fighting for the right to silk stockings and dating without her brother as chaperone, Jason Goldfarb as brother Bill the chaperone, and Zachary Crook as would-be date Joe Scales who walks into the house with confidence, humor and charisma, but changes his tune as Mr. Gilbreth makes demands like a brother as a chaperone. Overall it's an ensemble production, and it's the easy and natural interaction between all the many siblings and their parents that makes this production relatable, humorous, and ultimately very touching.
