13 the Musical

April 10-19, 2015

THE SHOW:

Music and Lyrics by Jason Robert Brown, Book by Dan Elish, Robert Horn as co-librettist.

Thirteen. It's a number with many negative connotations. Possibly none more negative than being thirteen years old. Puberty, acne, peer pressure, junior high. Good times only compounded for Evan when his parents get divorced and he is moved from the bright lights of New York City to the Dairy Queens of Appleton, Indiana. Perhaps things can get a little better in "The Lamest Place in the World" if he can make some new cool friends at his new school named after Indiana's favorite son (Dan Quayle Junior High) and get them to his upcoming Bar Mitzvah. But will he lose his new real friends in the process?

THE PRODUCTION:

PANIC! Productions is staging their first all-youth production with an all-star creative team and group of performers. They started at the Hillcrest Center for the Arts in Thousand Oaks and are taking it to the El Portal Theater in North Hollywood for a bonus weekend. Rabbi David Shukiar gets us rolling with the singing of a prayer as various projected images of religious items appear on the screen above the stage, leading to his melodramatic opening narration. When Evan gets the news he has to move from New York City to Appleton, Indiana, Evan cries out an anguished "Nooooo!" and the projected images depict the ten plagues of Egypt.

Sam Herbert stars as said Evan with a natural personality, good vocals, and easy comedy as he strives to have both real friends and popular friends at his new school. This includes trying to feel superhero-ish as he desperately plots in All Hail the Brain, his hilarious epiphany with friend Archie in Terminal Illness, and his initially hesitant responses to his aggressive new friend Patrice. Carly Shukiar is a perfect fit as the social outcast Patrice who is genuine, sweet, fun, and hurt by the cruelty of her classmates. Amusing with her barely contained excitement over new neighbor Evan in Lamest Place in the World, touching with her Friend song, and devastating when hurt by Evan in Good Enough. Samuel Thacker finishes the trio as terminally ill Archie who is great in the Good Enough scene as well, while also masterful as a creative comedian who shines in his pre-date preparations of Getting Ready, his Terminal Illness number with Evan and aided by a chorus of nurses, and his Get Me What I Need daydream aided by a chorus of cheerleaders.

Gabriel Nunag is the leader of the cool kids as Brett, exuding confidence, limited intelligence, and humor as he revels in his popularity, limbers up his tongue for Kendra, and faces his own uncertainties about dating. The role of Kendra is double-cast between Elaine Panico and, this night, Delaney Joy. The expressionable Delaney is funny and charming as the popular cheerleader with a happy, bubbly, slightly ditzzy personality who is obliviously clueless about her jealous, backstabbing friend. That would be her “friend” Lucy, and Antonia Vivino is a dynamite actress, singer, dancer, and evil villain as she plans her cheerleading-inspired revenge in Opportunity, intimidates and manipulates Brett and his friends, tutors Kendra on essential good-girl skills, and initiates the gossip cell phone chain with the help of a group of talented eager gossipers led by Madeline Gambon, Batya Conn, and Zoe Reed. Much comedy comes by way of Brett’s friends (Mackinnley Balleweg, Mateo Gonzales, Liam Krainman, and Mason Purece) lamenting the Bad Bad News of the Lucy relationship and with Mackinnley and Mateo creating the semi-romantic vibe with Hey Kendra.

Theatre, television, and film star Barry Pearl (credits including Doody from megahit film Grease) directs this one, and his experience pays off with remarkable attention to detail, expert staging, and a knack for fun and clever touches. Fantastic, athletic choreography by Keenon Hooks enlivens the show, increases the comedy, and helps further define the characters and their relationships. And it never hurts working with a deeply talented cast who shine in many big numbers including the opening New York sequence, Archie’s daydream dancers, amusing cheerleaders, bullying junior high students, grossed-out moviegoers in Any Minute, coming to grips with being thirteen in A Little More Homework, and cutting loose to close the show and enjoy their youth with a Brand New You.

The Sound of Music

November 7-23, 2014

THE SHOW:

The last Rodgers and Hammerstein collaboration became their biggest with the blockbuster film led by Julie Andrews. It's inspired by the von Trapp family that formed the Trapp Family Singers who fled Austria as Nazi Germany took over, and the musical score is certainly among the most complete featuring such hits as My Favorite Things, Sixteen Going on Seventeen, Climb Every Mountain, Edelweiss, and the title tune. While the terror of the approaching Nazis threatens in the background, the story centers around Maria whose love of singing sometimes gets her in trouble with the abbey where she is a postulant, and will also get her into a different kind of trouble when she gets assigned to be the governess of the soon-to-be-singing seven siblings of the widowed Captain von Trapp.

THE PRODUCTION:

Young Artists Ensemble presents this show nestled in the hills of Thousand Oaks at the Hillcrest Center for the Arts. Director Michael Fischer clearly pays attention to every detail of the show that includes a number of nice creative touches. A relatively long musical for youth theatre, the show is often done with cut songs. Those songs are thankfully included in this one with no worry about time, the scenes and interactions never rushed, all unfolding naturally among an impressive cast.

Shannon McGraw is our Maria, a marvelous actress who has an easy comedy and instincts with the children, and who feels every lyric whether she's building up her confidence in I Have Confidence (witnessed by a few townsfolk who look on with quizzical and sympathetic smiles), taking joy in teaching the children to sing, or falling for the captain. Ryan Bates nails his characterization of said captain, rigid but still human, quick to anger but controlled, and finally his heart and demeanor thawing thanks to Maria and his children. Their argument over the children upon his surprise return home is real and intense.

Alyssa Kriss ends the first act on a powerful note as the Mother Abbess singing Climb Ev'ry Mountain. Gabi Ditto is fantastic as the baroness engaged to the captain, both humorous and dramatic when the time comes. And she makes a great comedy team with moocher Max (Alexander Jackels) for their droll How Can Love Survive? duet and trio of No Way to Stop It with the captain. Sarah Hathaway also has a humorous cameo as Frau Schmidt. The nuns do a nice job with their chorus, and combine for a memorable discussion of how to solve a problem like Maria including the unimpressed Sister Berthe (Anthea Stobie) and the sweet and supportive Sister Margaretta (Lauren T. Alexander with a gorgeous voice). The ensemble is into it whether in the forefront or in the background and deliver an excellent dinner party scene.

And then there is a pretty amazing collection of seven siblings. Lyrissa Leininger is the eldest Liesl, with much of Do-Re-Mi slowly getting the reluctant Liesl to fully participate (great choreography and performances), and she charms in Sixteen Going on Seventeen with Rolf (Aaron Sallan). Jessica Wallace is a precocious, fun, and sassy Brigitta. Max Meyers is Friedrich desperate for his father's approval, Marissia Michelle Margolis sparkles as an adorable Marta, Allison Martinez is an amusing instigator as Louisa but also poignantly sensitive to the scolding by her father – as is Micah Meyers as young Kurt who always speaks volumes with often subtle expressions. While little Gretl (Lilly Thompson) lights up the stage with her unstoppable, bright and happy charisma. Combined, they work together like they've grown up together and add great heart to The Sound of Music.
